Brammer, the UK's leading distributor of industrial maintenance, repair and overhaul (MRO) products, has extensive experience of working with some of the biggest companies in the cement and aggregates industry. This knowledge helps us understand its special requirements and production processes, along with availability, energy conservation, and health and safety issues.

Highlighting Brammer's dedication to promoting best practice will be a range of products and services demonstrating how we provide customers with total shaft solutions for industrial fans used in the cement and aggregates industry.

These are an essential part of most plant installations, but can cause expensive downtime if not properly maintained. Everyday environmental factors such as heat, dirt, dust and gases can contribute to impeller imbalance and reliability problems.

Brammer can help prevent such problems, as well as reducing total acquisition costs, improving production efficiency and reducing working capital.
